

Look into your heart to see how you are living your life, the pope said days before celebrating his final Easter. Then ask yourself: has my life fallen asleep? Sister Catherine pondered this question during sleepless nights to conclude the pope was gently prodding her to leave behind comfortable and familiar things. However, the shelter for homeless children represented her life's work and the thought of leaving was like losing part of yourself. If this could be a test of faith, she seemed doomed to fail. Then the little boy she struggled to shepherd through a troubled adolescence reappeared after years to ask a favor -- one capable of changing both their lives. (The story is about 7700 words and 30 pages).
